

Storytime Guidelines

The main goal of our Storytimes is to promote a love of learning, books, and the library. We want the library to be a safe and welcoming space for you and your child. We want to encourage laughter, playing, and having fun. If your child is having a bad day and does not want to participate it's okay to get up and take them out or to go into the other room to play while the story is being finished. We want this to be a pleasant experience for everyone.

Parental/Adult attendance is required and involvement and participation are encouraged. When your child sees you enjoying books and songs, they will too. Modeling behavior is how they learn. Kids listen to, observe, and imitate the books and activities we share, thus building reading readiness as they grow. Our goal is to create positive interactions with books for the parent and the child to experience together.
